Understudy for Santa Claus.

Christmas-Tree Corps Badge.

Mr. W. H. Barnabee, the Sheriff of Nottingmusical stage, is a member of an Evening Police Court, Brooklyn, this morning, charg-World Curistmas Tree Corps. He was deco-ing William H. N. Cadmus, the Republican rated yesterday.

When the order of the pine and holly was ling to kill her. conferred upon him, he said, in his droll way, with a waltz step and a petulant tone : " Put it here. Put it here on my left side and let it warm the cockles of my old heart, as everything does that the children have snything to do with. They keep me young. and me every time."

"Do you know I haven't a pair of slippers - Do you know I haven't a pair of slippers por—a lounge coat to my name? Not a pair i was all three.

'Mo I don't want any, either. I wouldn't take a present of a set, no matter how picture eaque they might be. Once I put my leet in slippers now could I ever kreep up with the procession of youth and skip after the fitting girls?

'Yes, yes. It's a pretty badge! I like it. It just suits the season. What could be more appropriate for a Christmas badge, than a badge with a Christmas tree on it? I'll wear mine till the bolidays are gone, and I'll save it as long as the memory of Christmas abides with me.

'Blessed Christmas! It's the best day of the whole year, isn't it? For it makes children of us all. I wouldn't give up my bold on Christmas for all the fete days of all the nor-a lounge coat to my name? Not a pair!

thristmas for all the fete days of all the nations on earth. " It just takes fifty years off my age when I get thinking about chimney corners, Christ-mas stockings and Santa Claus. And when I read a story about a Christmas tree I am giorious, matchless twenty-seven.

"You didn't know that my best character was Santa Claus, did you? Well, it is. There are about five hundred men and women statement; they saw me in the role thirty- to visit his wife, a domestic, sixteen years two years ago, and whenever I meet them old, employed there. they say, 'How do, Santa?' "That was a great hit I made in 1860 up n Boston. I was singing in a church choir in Jamaica Plains. That was war time, you know, and the snow and financial troubles and the fighting disarranged the Christmas plans of Santa Claus, and he couldn't get to the Jamaica Plains Sunday-school festival. I was a tall fellow, and somehow the minister picked me out of all that big con gregation of good men to be the understudy in case the gift god didn't appear. Of cours I was flattered and frightened, but I began to study the part about this time. " 'Mrs. l'artington '-E. P. Shillaber-wrote me a beautiful little address and my folks helped me to get my costume. There were about 700 children in the Sunday-school, and all the old folks who could squeeze into the building came to the festival.

· I remember a small boy with cheeks like red apples and a little suit of clothes that fitted him like the bag on a well-done plum pudding had been selected to recite:

Twas the night before Christmas, And all through the house Not a creature was stirring— Not even a mouse.

"When he came to the line about the clat ter on the roof' I bounced in through the window and took the whole festival by sur prise. The young reader didn't expect me at all and he never finished that carol. The apple tints left his fat, sweet cheeks, his little fingers stood apart like icicles, his mouth Mary Creed without having attended her. opened and he got as white as the beard I wore. "When I began to say funny things and inquire about the naughty boys who went fishing on Sunday, and the little girls who habitually forgot their verses, astonishment gave place to the most exquisite delight. Merriment was not the word, the little little light. opened and he got as white as the beard ment gave place to the most exquisite de-light. Merriment was not the word, the little ones were entranced. I delivered the address ene of the sweetest things poor Mr. Shillabe over wrote, and then I opened my pack and went round the infant class with presents, which I bestowed with band clasps and love pats and as many sweet things as I could

"That was the hit of my life. Scores of peother engagements, but they were not like pital.

I believe I have been an understudy for the dear old Christmas King every year since. I remember one year we were on the road going from St. Louis to Cincinnati: but that didn't make any difference. We kept Christmas as it should be kept.

"We had a private car, the men were driven out of the smoking room, a tree was rought in, I made up as well as I could with Badly Damaged. feathers and curled hair plucked from pillows and mattresses, ravellings of bath towels, joily time with loads of presents, plenty of nue, Brooklyn. songs, laughter and carols, a few toars and a lot of the true spirit of Christ-There were no children on that occasion, but after all there is only a sad difference between the little ones and those of an older growth.

EVENING WORLD'S efforts to help the poor children understand the true significance of Christmas. And I'm giad to be even an nonbrary member of the Christmas Tree Corps."
